Timberland Liability Insurance Specifications

Liability: the state of being legally obligated or responsible.

The litigious nature of society has increased the timberland owner's concern with the inherent liability attached to ownership of property. Common law principles provide the legal parameters for the rights and duties of landowners. Under common law a landowner has a duty to invitees, licensees, and to a lesser degree, trespassers, on their property. Simplified, a landowner has a duty to inspect the property, remove hidden dangers, keep the property in reasonably safe condition, and take precautions to protect a user from foreseeable danger.

Several recent court cases have given some indication of a broadening of the scope of these parameters. An Illinois high court recently ruled that a landowner can be held negligent for a trespasser's injuries "caused by a condition" if the landowner could have reasonably anticipated the trespasser's presence. The U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the case thus, creating another exception to the limited liability landowners have for injury to trespassers.

In response to these developments, Outdoor Underwriters, Inc. has developed a timberland liability insurance program that provides legal liability coverage for timberland owners. This coverage is designed to provide general liability protection to landowners. The insurance agreement used to provide coverage states "pay on behalf of the insured all sums which the insured shall become legally obligated to pay as damages because of bodily injury or property damage caused by an occurrence arising out of ownership or use of the designated timberland." The legal obligation clause is a broad insurance statement that provides protection to landowners that may be held legally obligated or responsible for a negligent act. As a liability policy, coverages are intended for third-party claims against timberland owners.

Coverages within this program are shaped by the exclusions presented in the policy. All liability insurance policies provide these exclusions that define the liability coverages. Some examples of these exclusions are bodily injury or property damage arising out of use of any automobile, or aircraft; bodily injury or property damage arising out of discharge of smoke, vapors, soot, or pollutants; any obligation for which the insured may be held liable under workers' compensation; property in the care, custody, or control of the insured; assault and battery; hunting leases or commercial hunting; and damage by fire.

Type of Insurance: Commercial General Liability Insurance

Limit of Liability: $1,000,000 per occurrence (bodily injury and property damage)/
